Christopher Holtslag is the founder of Vanisle Wetlands. From growing up in B.C.'s interior, canoeing and portaging through beaver ridden lakes and ponds to trekking his children through the salal-filled forests of Vancouver Island, looking for beaver lodges and gathering local medicinal plants, Chris' love for the woods is what steered him into this line of work.

As a skilled outdoorsman, experienced commercial diver and trained by the Beaver Institute, Chris uses his experience and technical expertise to build flow devices to resolve human-beaver conflicts in the most cost-effective, long-term and environmentally friendly manner possible. His efforts help homeowners, businesses and government agencies use a non-lethal approach to resolve issues related to beaver activity.

See www.Vanislewetlands.ca for some of Vanisle Wetlands projects.

Note, Christopher received training from the Beaver Institute as a Beaver Wetland Professional, and is a member in good standing in the Beaver Institute's International BeaverCorps Association.
