After many years of operating machinery and running crews building mountain bike and hiking trails all over the U.S., Beaver Leavers owner/operator Justin Jendza united his interest in wetland preservation and construction by taking a professional development course through the Beaver Institute in 2020. He splits his time between Michigan and the western U.S., where he works on large trail and bridge construction projects in remote backcountry wilderness areas. He is excited to help play a part in bringing flow devices and other non-lethal beaver control methods to the Great Lakes region.

Note, Justin received training from the Beaver Institute as a Beaver Wetland Professional, and is a member in good standing in the Beaver Institute's International BeaverCorps Association.
