NY Beavers Work is a beaver conflict resolution and consultation company, owned and operated by Nico Juarez of Sullivan County, New York. Nico is a small business owner, and by trade a custom furniture maker and metal fabricator. Over the past three years, he has joined both his professional building skills and his passion for wetland preservation to resolve beaver-human conflicts. Nico was trained in the design and installation of flow devices through the mentorship of Mike Callahan and the Beaver Institute. He has developed a fond appreciation of beavers as keystone species and of the vital wetlands ecosystems they create. He is available for consultation, able to install pond leveler and culvert protective devices, and perform routine maintenance on these systems in the Mid-Hudson region of New York and North Eastern Pennsylvania.

Note, Nico received training from the Beaver Institute as a Beaver Wetland Professional, and is a member in good standing in the Beaver Institute's International BeaverCorps Association.
